SKINNY CORLEONE

Alfonso Gallmon, also known as Skinny Corleone is a DC-based independent filmmaker, passionate about inspiring his viewers through the power of visual storytelling. He is the founder and owner of 49th Parallel Films, - a leading entity in video and motion picture production and post-editing. Skinny Corleone is also the founder and Lead Agent at 49th Parallel Bookings & Mgmt, - an agency dedicated to signing Acting talent and submit them to a variety of gigs in the Mid-Atlantic, East, and Southern State markets.

Inspired by Martin Lawrence in the early 90s, he set out to become a working actor in the DC area, under the tutelage of veteran Hollywood actor, Ralph Tabatin's Maryland Academy of Dramatic Arts. Fortunately, he had access to an actual film script while on the production set of a local film where he was cast as a minor drug dealer. From there, he was deeply inspired to learn the ways of actually writing his own story in screenplay format. Seeking to widen his horizon of learning, he acquired two books on "How To Write A Script" by Hollywood writer Syd Fields. As someone who enjoys projecting the best in everything he does, it took him two and a half years to read the books, master the craft and finish his first screenplay titled, "Urban Survival." After experiencing some major hiccups in putting his copyright script out there, he set out to produce the film using camera equipment rented from Dc Public Access TV with neighborhood friends in the starring roles.

However, the project was shelved back in 1997, and thereafter, 48th-49th Records was founded with Skinny Corleone serving as its' CEO and President. 48th-49th Records is a recording label that released projects such as Tha Houze of Representativetz Vol1., 48th-49th Compilation Vol.1, Relentlezz Dre: The Rel One and the Angel Thugz Maxi Single from 1998 to 2006. Subsequently, in 2005, he rekindled the flame of his first love of filmmaking by re-entering the filmmaking and video sector and directed his first music video for local Hip Hop artist, Pop Da Czar.

Skinny Corleone produced his first movie project "Urban Survival" in (Include Year); which proves to be a rousing showcase of the filmmaker's talent. The award-winning filmmaker has bags of awards on his shelf. He is the recipient of the coveted Best Video Producer Award 3-years in a row at the DMV-EMAs (2008/2009/2010) for Directing and Producing several local music videos for Indie artists. With an ardent eye for detail, he works tirelessly to ensure a Film gets the best attention it deserves. Fast forward to recent years where he has served as Director of Photography and editor for Independent Streaming Series "GRANDMA's HOUSE", the feature film "TRUTH" and now the short film: "BLINQ" for 49th Parallel films. As a result, he continues to produce high-quality filmed entertainment for every demographic with his production company, 49th Parallel Films. Skinny Corleone is presently on the lookout for distributors who has an eye for what he brings to the table.

Becoming a permanent fixture and mainstay in the world of video and filmed entertainment is the driving force behind everything he does. Amanda Faye now known as AFAYE is the (Lead) in the film "Blinq". A film written and Directed by Skinny Corleone of 49th Parallel Films.
